SCBWI Directory of International Schools
Edited by Holly Thompson (updated October 2017)

Introduction to the Directory of International Schools

The SCBWI Directory of International Schools helps connect SCBWI authors, illustrators and translators who do school visits with interested international schools around the world. The Directory lists international schools that feature (or plan to feature) author, illustrator or translator visits. The submission period for schools to submit data for the Directory is September 1 to October 15. Librarians at international schools worldwide are encouraged to submit info for their schools. International schools worldwide wishing to submit data should fill out the online form here: http://www.scbwi.org/school-visit-information/

International schools usually embrace a global outlook. The community of an international school—the administrators, faculty, students and families—typically includes members of many different cultures, languages and belief systems, and the approach to education tends to be truly international. Some international schools follow the International Baccalaureate (IB) programs, including the IB Primary Years Program, the IB Middle Years Program, and the IB Diploma Program; other international schools follow the national curriculum of a particular country, such as Australian Schools, Japanese Schools or British Schools. While some international schools include students of the local culture, some international schools are forbidden by local law from accepting local students. And in countries such as South Korea, international schools may be composed almost entirely of students from the local culture studying in English. Some international schools are aligned with a particular religious faith. Most international schools are located in or near major cities.

The information in this Directory was contributed by librarians at the international schools listed. The SCBWI hopes that this Directory of International Schools will continue to grow, and that this Directory, combined with the Guide to International School Visits in SCBWI’s The Book, ultimately will benefit schools, authors, illustrators, translators, and, most importantly, children worldwide.

Grades K – 12; visits to grades K – 10; main language of instruction: English; other languages taught: French, Spanish, Arabic; 1 – 2 visits per year, prefer Oct. – Mar.; contact minimum of 3 months in advance—planning takes place the previous year so visits are locked in the calendar in March each year for the following school year starting in August. Have an open mind to visit Sudan—we host you in a great hotel and take you to see our famous (in Sudan) pyramids at the end of your stay. Author visits are 5 days—Sunday to Thursday with 4 – 5 classes/workshops per day; this includes 1 staff professional development workshop and one parent talk/workshop. Send e-mails to both these addresses as e-mails sometimes don't get through: senior.library@kics.sd and jeanette.brooker@kics.sd
